Long-time assassination researcher Mark Lane has announced he will soon file a multi-million dollar lawsuit against the CIA. The suit results from CIA documents recently released to Lane which tell of CIA efforts to employ media "assets" to counter doubts raised by Lane about the Warren Commission's findings. These documents tell how the government agency provided material to reviewers that would "answer and refute the attacks of the critics" and even wrote reviews themselves.

Lane further plans to ask the court to provide injunctive relief to prohibit the CIA from engaging in any such actions against his soon to be published book on the Martin Luther King assassination.
